Dating Dracula, Jr. V.J. Frankenstein has a lot on her mind. She has a brother that her father made in his basement laboratory who drives her crazy. He is a monster - literally, along with her two sisters, who are not really monsters, they just act like it. She cannot partner with BFF Bea Franklin for her science project since they accidentally blew up the science lab last year with their quantum physics project. Jason Jekyll, her ex-boyfriend, wants to get back together, but he is too picky. And Hart Hyde, his cousin, is crazy about Debbs Van Helsing who is crazy about Seth, son of the Mummy. So nobody is happy in love. V.J. does not even have a date for the Halloween Dance. And to top it all off, their high school mascot is lame. So, V.J. and her friends decide to find a new mascot. A zombie would be perfect. Only when they open the grave you will never guess who they find. Now, ghouls, werewolves and vampires are all out to put the bite on them. And who is chasing after them is the biggest secret of all. There is danger, deceit and deadly intent. It is monster mayhem with flashing fangs, stabbing stakes, wacked werewolves and exploding garlic bombs (which Bea Franklin, a chip off the old Ben Franklin block invents to save the day). In the midst of all this monster mashing and malevolent madness, only V.J. Frankenstein could get a date to the Halloween Dance, even though he sucks. But then he is the grandson of Dracula!
