(8 Audio Cassettes/12 Hours) For a child, living in a foreign country, with its strange customs and a gooblygoock language, is tough enough. But now add to this the horror of losing your parents in a war zone and spending three years in a prison camp. In Empire of the Sun, a young British boy, in Shanghai with his parents, lives that nightmare after the Japanese attack the city. He lives through it to witness the white flash of Nagasaki, a frightening cap to his experience and to the war. Where does he find the strength to bear it?
