City Speculations: Patricia ed. Phillips

Through a collection of essays and projects, City Speculations investigates different modes of representing urban space. Responding to Robert Moses's Panorama of the City of New York, housed at the Queens Museum of Art, an impressive collection of artists, architects, and theorists attempt to infuse the dynamism of the living city into urban representation and demonstrate how the process of representation can effect the final outcome of urban design. Essays by Patricia Phillips and M. Christine Boyer specifically address how and why Moses, New York's "Power Broker," employed the Panorama as a tool and demonstration of his own global vision.

Originally an exhibition at the Queens Museum, City Speculations includes projects by: Balch & Baratloo; Diller + Scofidio; Keller Easterling; the Environmental Simulation Center; Andrea Kahn; Ana Marton; Brian McGrath; Kyong Park; Richard Plunz; RAAUM; Mark Robbins; Newark Metametrics; Wellington Reiter; Mierle Ukeles; and Camilio Vergara.
