Mormonism: A Bar Too High and Eighty-eight Keys Dr William L Hutchinson

This is one man's life's journey. He was born in the typical Mormon family in 1922 and would struggle throughout the depression years. When World War II came, he made his priority to serve his country rather than serve a Mormon Mission. He became a pilot during World War II. He return from the War with a strong desire to acquire advanced degrees and committed to service for others. He is a prominent, involved human being, with a great sense of responsibility to his country and community. There are few who have lived, of whom I am aware, able to accomplish such great things. I am among the many that are a better person because of him and his positive influence our lives. Thanks for giving your life to the service of others.

—Dan Simons
